Guidance notes

Please note this nomination is for a person(s) with a learning disability

What is a learning disability?

A learning disability is significant and lifelong. It starts before adulthood and affects the person's development. This means that a person with a learning disability will likely need help to understand information, learn skills and have a fulfilling life. Some people with a learning disability will also have healthcare needs and require support to communicate.

About the award

A community can refer to a group of people living in the same place, or to people who have something in common. However, it can mean so much more to people who benefit from having a shared sense of identity, and who find strength in the people around them.

Your nomination

Award criteria

This award recognises the difference that a person or group of people with learning disabilities can make when they champion the causes of their community, and work to make things better for everyone.

Please include the following information for the judges:

- Describe what the person or group is doing within the community and what makes them a 'champion'
- Demonstrate what the person or group is doing for others
- Provide evidence of any positive changes that have happened and tell us how things in the community have been made better
- Demonstrate and evidence challenges faced and overcome
- Demonstrate the ambition of the person or group.

What happens next?

Once the judging process is completed, SCLD will inform the nominator of the outcome. We will contact everyone during the week beginning 25th March 2019.

Keep in touch

If you have any questions about the nomination process, please email awards@sclد.co.uk or call 0141 248 3733.
