Guidance notes

Please note this nomination is for a person(s) with a learning disability

What is a learning disability?

A learning disability is significant and lifelong. It starts before adulthood and affects the person's development. This means that a person with a learning disability will likely need help to understand information, learn skills and have a fulfilling life. Some people with a learning disability will also have healthcare needs and require support to communicate.

About the award

People with a learning disability find opportunities within sport that have the potential to transform their health, wellbeing and outlook on life. However, people with a learning disability are often excluded from mainstream sporting activities.

Your nomination

Award criteria

The Sport Achievement award recognises the success of an individual or team of people with a learning disability who have made sport a meaningful part of their life, and whose story challenges others to consider sport and the concept of achievement in a new way.

Please include the following information for the judges:

- Demonstrate the impact that participation in sport has had on the person's life
- Demonstrate how the person or team has inspired others or challenged expectations through their participation in sport
- Provide evidence of the extent to which individual(s) have made significant progress in their sport
- Demonstrate that the individual(s) have shown exceptional dedication and commitment over time
- Demonstrate the challenges faced by the person or team in their chosen sport and how these were overcome.

What happens next?

Once the judging process is completed, SCLD will inform the nominator of the outcome. We will contact everyone during the week beginning 25th March 2019.

Keep in touch

If you have any questions about the nomination process, please email awards@sclد.co.uk or call 0141 248 3733.
