

Making events kind and respectful

People at our events might share their experience of learning disability and other challenges.

Sometimes these experiences might be personal and sensitive.

People in our events have different opinions and know different things.

Some people might talk about things that you do not like or make you uncomfortable.

Please think of your own comfort during and after the event.

SCLD wants our event to be a safe space.

A safe space is where people are kind to each other and do not cause harm to other people.

Everyone should treat each other with respect and be kind.

Here are some things we can all do to make sure our events are safe, kind, and respectful:

If the chat is being used, put questions and comments in the chat.

But remember that the chat is not accessible for everyone.

Someone from SCLD will always be looking at the chat to make sure everyone is being kind and respectful.

Any person in the meeting who is not being kind or respectful to other attendees or speakers will be put out of the event.

If a person is not being kind or respectful, please tell a member of SCLD staff.

Only share experiences about your life that you are happy to tell others.

Do not share anything about other people.

Think about how what you say or do could make other people feel.

Always be kind about others even if they are not in the meeting.

Do not record or take pictures of the event.

SCLD will tell you if the event is being recorded.

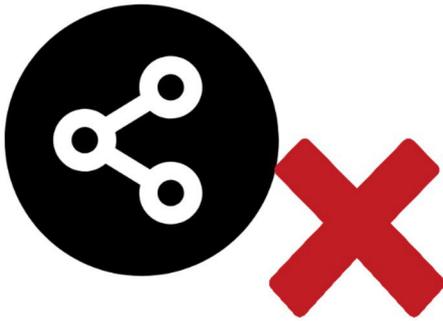

If you do not want to be recorded, please turn off your camera.

If you want to ask a question or say something, please use the raise hand option.

Please stay on mute when other people are talking.

Do not share the link for the event with anyone that is not coming to the meeting.

SCLD tries to use inclusive language, but some speakers may use different words.
